Pursuant to a congressional request, GAO discussed the Internal Revenue Services (IRS) modernization efforts, focusing on the business practice, performance management, and information technology challenges IRS faces. GAO noted that: (1) IRS acknowledges that it will need to do more than make marginal improvements in the efficiency and effectiveness of its current business practices; (2) accordingly, IRS is planning to implement breakthrough changes to those practices; (3) only when these changes are implemented will taxpayers see any appreciable benefits from IRS multiyear modernization; (4) IRS has some initiatives of this type underway, but they, and other business practice changes, will not be easy to implement; (5) this type of reengineering requires not only a new way of thinking, but also investments in human capital, data collection, and technology; (6) no matter what organizational structure or business practices IRS establishes, successful modernization ultimately depends on whether the employees who are to lead, manage, and carry out agency programs and services can deliver IRS new mission of top-quality customer service and improved overall compliance; (7) historically, IRS performance management system emphasized revenue production...
