Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Pipes and Perdition Scene. - A private Salon in the Hotel Violette, Paris. The furniture and decorations should indicate that the suite is specially appropriated to bridal parties. Double doors at the back opening upon a passage with a practical window. A door, R., leading to the room set apart for Miss Moloch. Door, L., opening upon the chamber occupied by Captain Valentine and his bride. A sofa, chairs, and several tables loaded with flowers in various stages of fadedness furnish the stage. As the curtain rises the doors are all carefully closed, and the Captain is discovered in a rich dressing-gown and cap, lying upon the sofa, smoking a German pipe. He affects an insouciant air, but is evidently nervous. Captain (ejecting wreaths of smoke). Sublime tobacco! which, from east to west, cheers the tar s labor and the Turkman s rest. Let me see - how does the apostrophe run? Ah, yes! Divine in hookas, glorious in a pipe, when tipped with amber, mellow, rich, and ripe; like other charmers, wooing the caress more - more - Confound my memory! how treacherous it is, to be sure! Who would have believed that I, Vane Valentine, could have forgotten a single word that was ever written, spoken or thought in praise of that which was once my pet dissipation! Ah, well! half a blissful honeymoon, total abstinence from the alluring weed, and a general condition of much-marriedness have wrought this startling change in me. This is actually the first opportunity I have had in two weeks of paying my respects to the darling pipes, which, during my happy bachelor days, stood by me in...
