R: Seventeenth Annual Encampment, Denver, Col., July 23, 1883 Another march is ended and we have pitched our tents in the shadow of the snow-capped mountains in this beautiful city on the plain and again clasp hands, renew the old ties, sing the old songs, and march with steady footsteps in grand review. It is true that many who touched elbow last year have passed beyond the silent river, yet, as in the days of war, when our ranks were thinned by disease or torn by shot and shell and the vacant places were filled by the reserve or the recruits called again and again, so now we meet with solid front, thickened lines and firm purpose, having drawn from the ranks of the old grand army thousands to fill the places of those mustered out We meet in a State that was not one of the stars on the flag we fought for from 61 to 65, in a city that was...

Reviews

This is the finest book i have got study right up until now. I am quite late in start reading this one, but better then never. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.
